

Locavore to the Core

GoToWebinar

May 13, 2021

7:00 p.m. – 8:30 p.m.

The NJ Division of Fish and Wildlife's R3 Program invites you to join us Thursday evening, May 13 for a GoToWebinar series on the rising trend of locavorism. These events are designed to provide an informative and welcoming introduction to learn about this lifestyle or expand on their current participation.

About the Event: This event is completely virtual using the GoToWebinar platform. Our speaker, Division Biologist, Keith Griglak, will be discussing what it means to secure your own food from the wilds of NJ. Whether you are a hunter, nonhunter, angler, foodie or someone who just wants to have a greater appreciation on where their food comes from, this program will give you new perspective on what it means to be a true sportsmen. The evening will include tips and tricks to being a surf to turf New Jersey Locavore!

The Webinar room will open by 6:55 pm however the presentation does not start until 7:00 p.m. All participants will have their microphones muted. Questions and comments can be asked during the webinar in the "Question" Box.

Workshop Fee: FREE

Registration: Please register for the event Here. You will receive an email-confirmation once you are fully registered.

Questions? Contact Briana Merriel at R3mentoredhunt@dep.nj.gov or call 856-629-1014 (office).

Locavore

One who eats foods harvested locally whenever possible

